

RECHANNLED x REACH

A dozen audiences. Twenty contact routes. One front door.

We haven't redesigned anything. These are Reach's own pages, with the standard reChannelled widget added and configured with Reach's own topics. Readers, subscribers, advertisers, investors and pensioners each get to the right place first time.

SCENE 1 · TODAY

reachplc.com/contacts: the visitor does the routing.

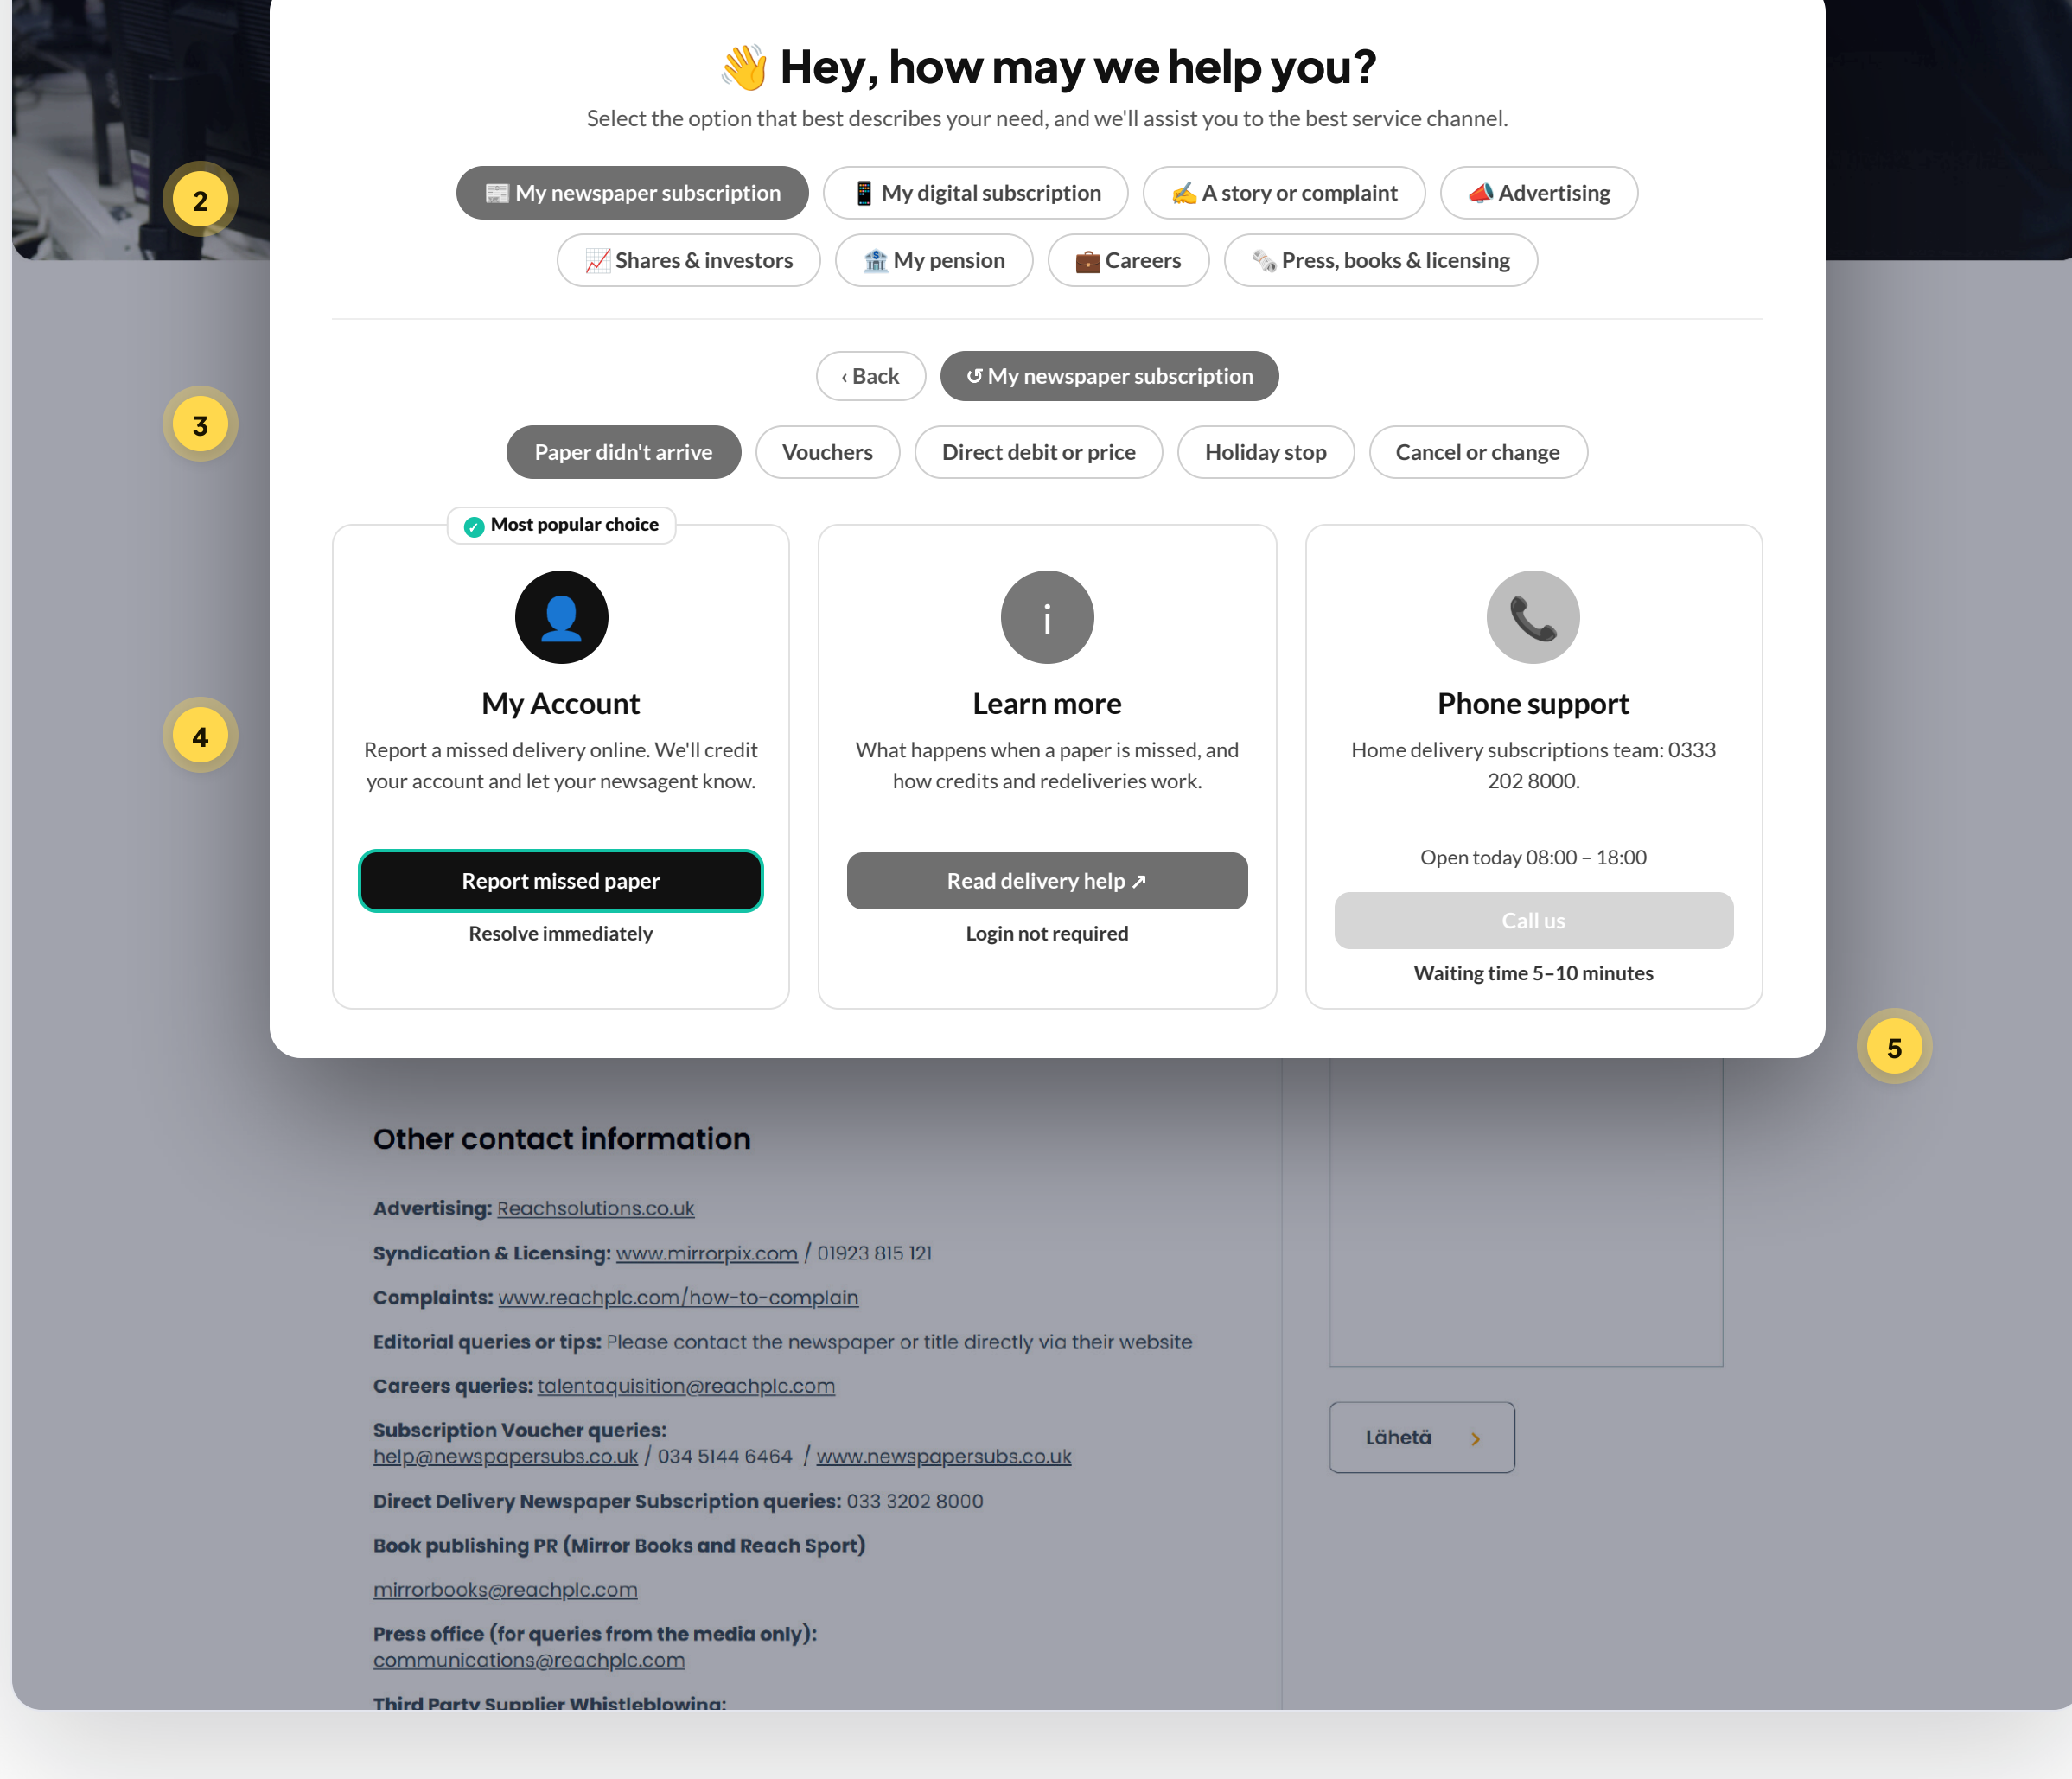

One page serves readers, print subscribers, complainants, advertisers, journalists, job seekers, suppliers, shareholders and pensioners. It lists eight phone numbers and six e-mail addresses. The only form is for investors, and there's no route at all for the 50,000+ new digital subscribers.

SCENE 2 · THE SAME PAGE, WITH RECHANNLED

“Who are you, and what do you need?” Answered in two taps.

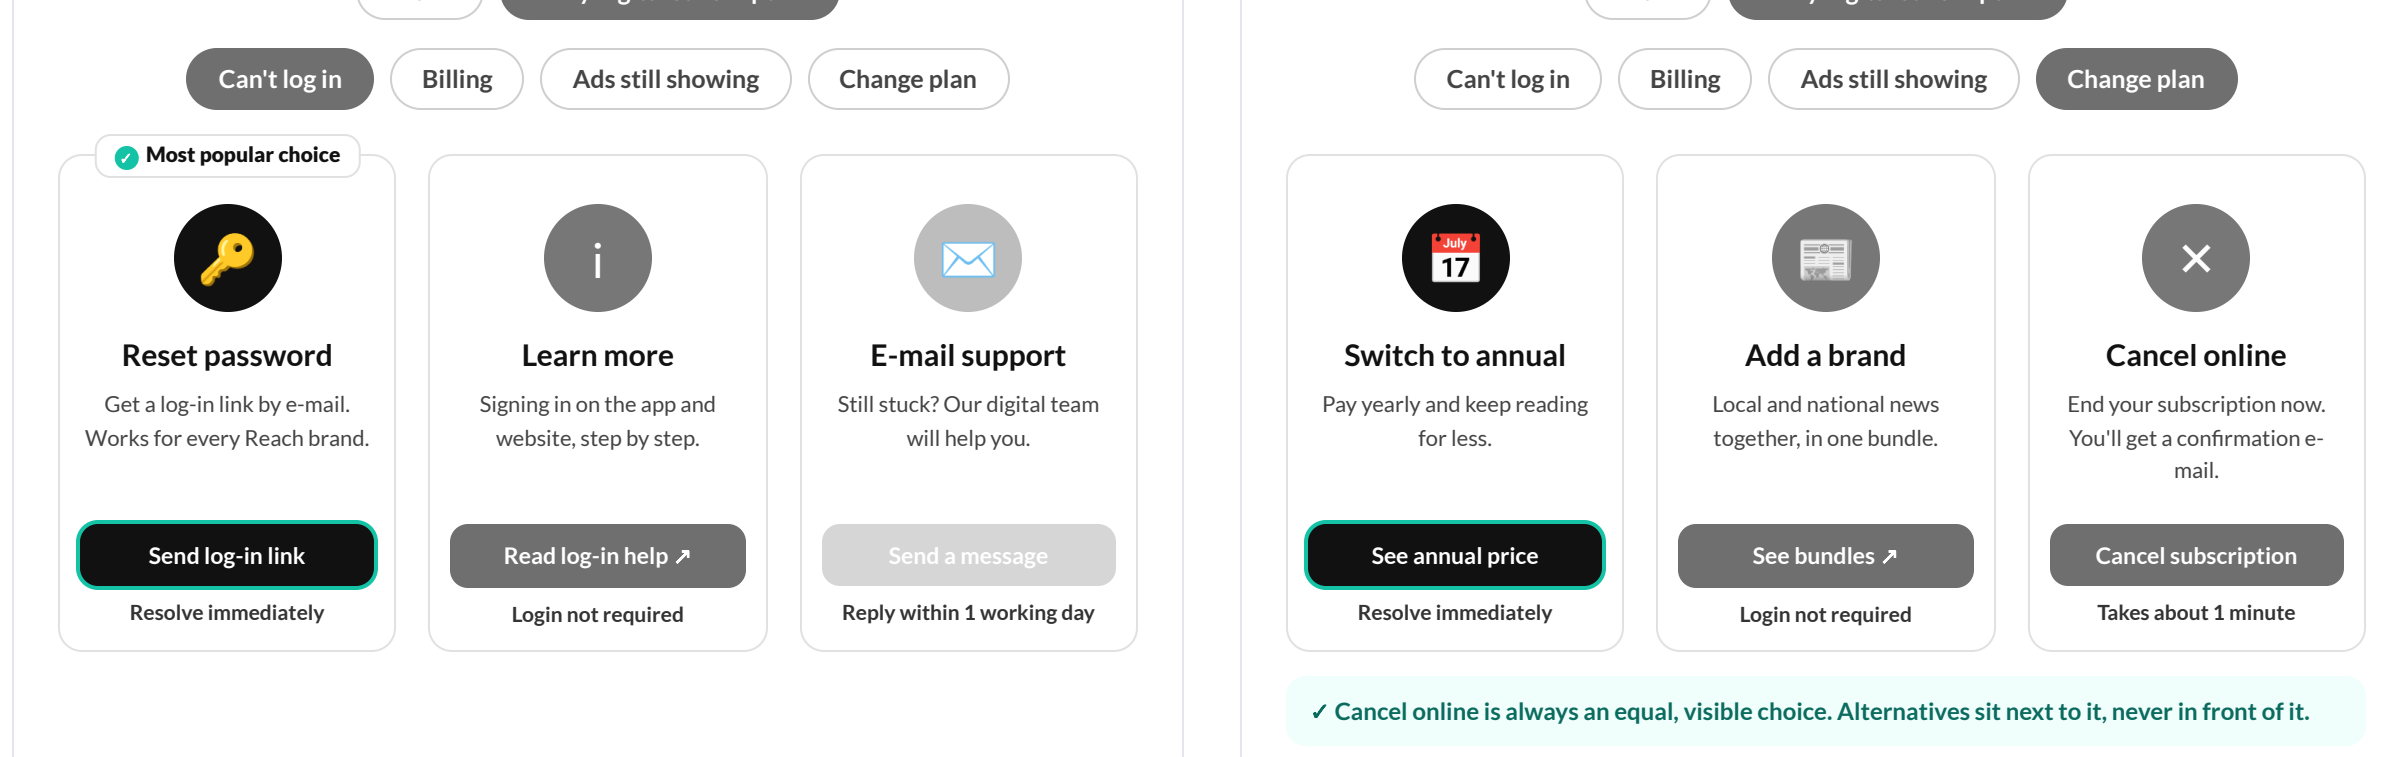

The widget sits at the top of the contacts page. Every audience sees itself in the first row of topics. Here a print subscriber picks “My newspaper subscription”, then “Paper didn't arrive”, and gets the fastest fix, with the right phone number as an honest back-up.

SCENE 3 · DIGITAL SUBSCRIBERS

A home for the 50,000+ new Premium subscribers, and fair cancellations.

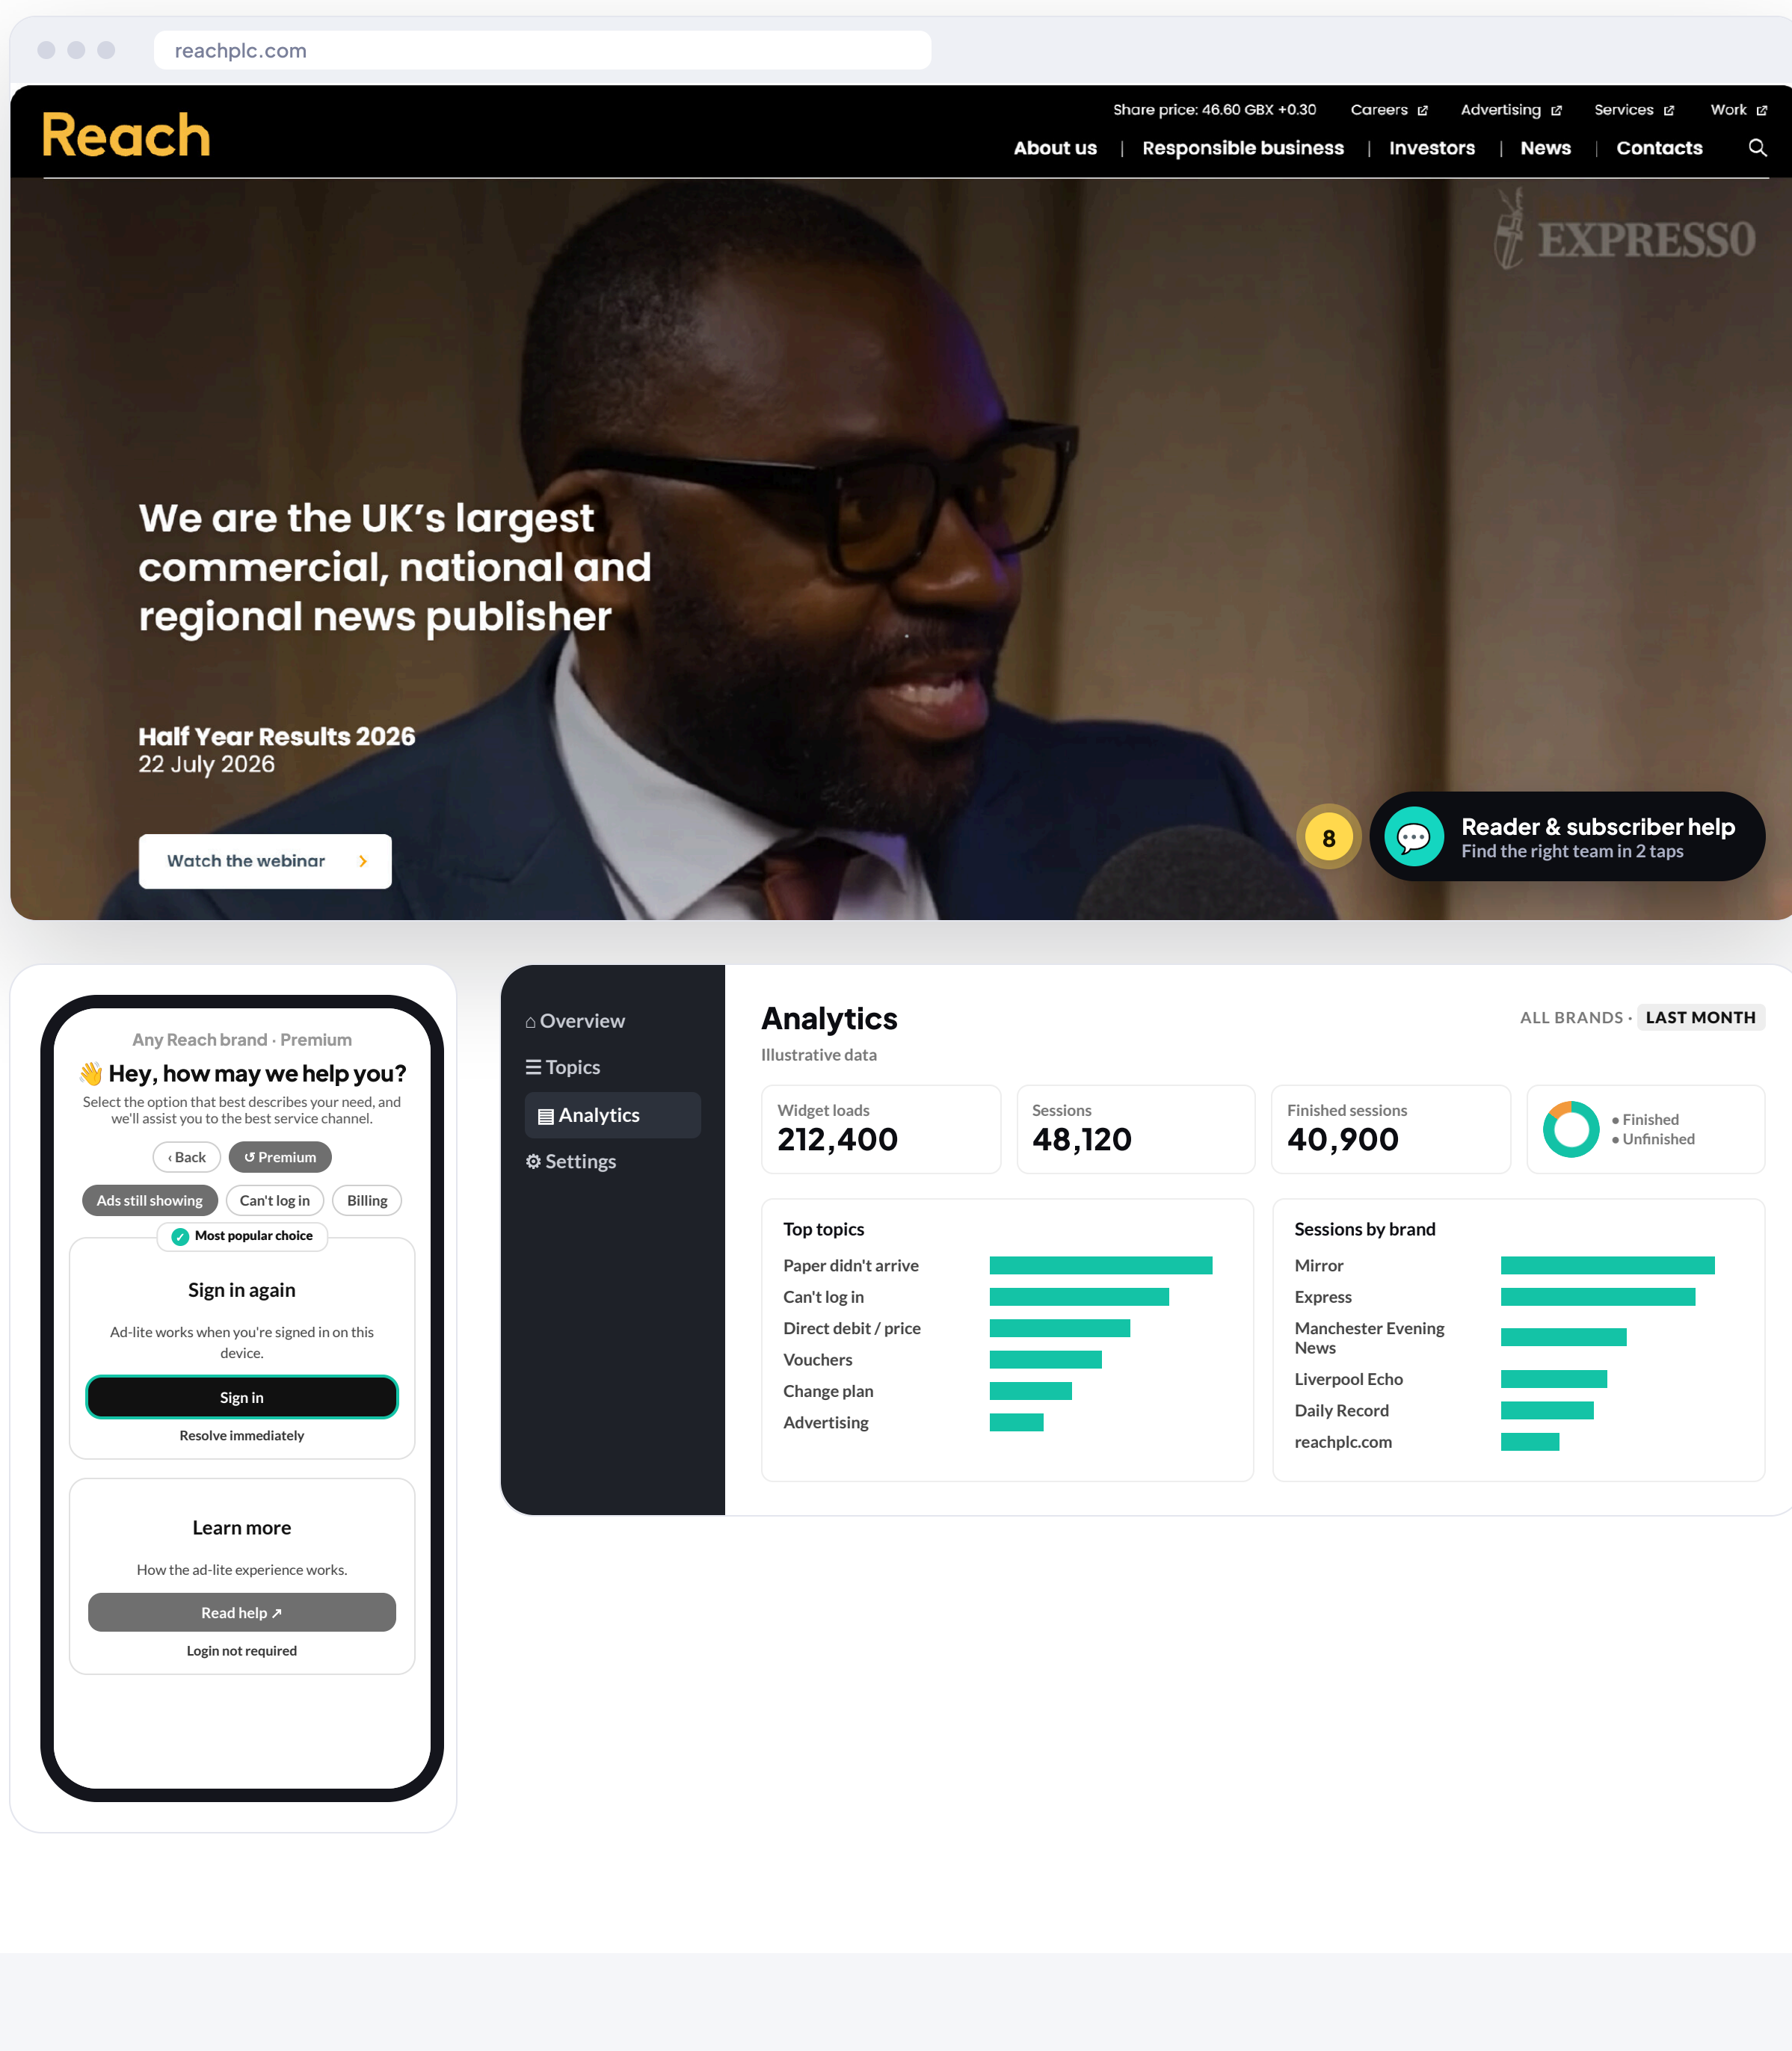

Reach now sells subscriptions on 19 brands. The same widget gives Premium subscribers a clear route for log-in, billing and plan changes. Cancelling online sits next to the alternatives as an equal choice, ready for the UK's new subscription rules.

SCENE 4 · EVERY BRAND, ONE VIEW

On reachplc.com, on every brand, and in one analytics view.

A “Reader help” button on the corporate homepage. The same widget on the Mirror, Express, Manchester Evening News and every brand selling subscriptions, with each brand's own topics. One admin panel shows the Customer team what readers need, brand by brand.
