

Two UK publishers. Two pitches built just for them.

Samples of personalised account-based outreach for reChanneld's UK entry. Each pitch has a short account brief, a channel-strategy mock-up made for that publisher, and a ready-to-send outreach sequence.

DC Thomson

Dundee · The Courier, The Press and Journal, The Sunday Post, The People's Friend, Beano, Stylist...

Iliffe Media Group

Cambridge · KentOnline, Cambridge Independent, and 30 former Tindle titles taken on in 2026

DC Thomson

A 120+ year-old Dundee publisher putting money into marketing, technology, data and AI to grow digital subscriptions. Its subscribers currently have to work out which of several phone lines to call.

£41M

subscription revenue (FY to Mar 2025, +1%)

50,000+

paying subscribers to its regional news titles

4+

separate phone lines for subscribers, by title and topic

9–5

shop contact centre hours, Mon–Fri

What we noticed

- Many front doors. The Courier digital (0800 029 4956), Press and Journal digital (0800 029 4955), home delivery (01382 575427) and DC Thomson Shop magazines (0800 904 7260) each have their own number. The customer has to choose the right one.
- Contact reasons that repeat. Even with a 4.8/5 Trustpilot score, the complaints are the same few topics: missing or late issues, billing frequency, refunds and early renewal reminders. These are ideal for self-service.
- Evenings and weekends. Shop subscribers are served 9–5 on weekdays. Readers who notice a missing Saturday paper have nowhere to go until Monday.
- Self-service exists already. Subscription management runs through Air Business (renewed on a 3-year contract) and DC Thomson's own help section. The tools are there, but customers aren't steered towards them.

The opportunity

One “How can we help?” front door for every DC Thomson title. It steers missing issues, billing and delivery questions to self-service around the clock, and saves agents' time for cancellations and win-back calls, where a human conversation protects revenue.

Why it fits their strategy

- Supports the stated investment in technology, data and AI with an affordable layer, not a replatforming project
- Works with Air Business and the existing help pages; no rip-and-replace
- Protects the £41 M subscription line: fewer frustrated calls about missing issues means less churn
- One set of channel rules can be reused across news, magazines and Beano

Sources: Press Gazette & Scottish Financial News (FY to 31 Mar 2025 results), InPublishing / Air Business (subscriptions contract), DC Thomson and Press and Journal contact pages, Trustpilot (DC Thomson Shop). Facts to be re-checked before sending.

What their subscribers would see

/subscriber-help

Hi! What can we help with?

Pick a topic and we'll show you the quickest way to sort it.

My paper or magazine didn't arrive

Report it online, replacement sent

2 min · 24/7

Billing or payment dates

See and change in My Account

Self-service

Pause for holidays

Set your dates in seconds

1 min

Change or cancel my subscription

Talk to our subscriptions team

Mon–Fri 9–5

one front door for every title · powered by reChanneld

Illustrative mock-up, not a DC Thomson page

Who to approach

ROLE	ANGLE
Head of Customer Service / Contact Centre	Fewer repeat calls
Consumer Revenue / Subscriptions Director	Churn and retention
Digital / Product Director, News	AI and tech investment

Find names on LinkedIn; message 2 people in parallel.

Outreach sequence

1 · LinkedIn connection note

174 characters

Hi [Name], DC Thomson subscribers can choose between 4+ phone lines. We help publishers guide readers to the fastest fix instead. Made a short idea for you, could I share it?

2 · E-mail, day 2

Subject: One front door for DC Thomson subscribers

Hi [Name],

Your subscribers can reach you on at least four different numbers, depending on the title and the problem. And the problems repeat: missing issues, billing dates, renewals.

reChanneld puts one “How can we help?” front door on your help pages. It sends simple requests to self-service 24/7, with Air Business and your existing help pages, so your team keeps its time for cancellations and win-backs.

Nordic banks such as S-Bank (3.3 M customers) use it today. Our clients typically guide 79% of contacts to their preferred channel.

I've made a one-page mock-up of what it could look like for DC Thomson. Worth 20 minutes to walk through it?

Touko Laakkonen, reChanneld

3 · Follow-up, day 7

Reply on the same thread

Hi [Name], one detail: shop subscribers who notice a missing Saturday issue currently wait until Monday to reach someone. A 24/7 front door fixes that on day one. Mock-up attached in case it's useful. Touko

reChanneld x DC Thomson — sample by Kira Krysanov

3

Iliffe Media Group

A family-owned regional publisher in the middle of a big integration. In 2026 it took on 30 Tindle titles through a joint venture with the Fowler family, and plans to make building digital subscriptions for those titles a priority.

30

former Tindle titles added in 2026 (Wales, West Country, Surrey, Hampshire, Isle of Man)

30,000+

digital subscribers before the Tindle deal

11

counties served across England, plus the new regions

3+

support paths: subscriptions site, title pages, PageSuite for e-editions

What we noticed

- Integration moment. Readers of 30 titles are about to get new subscription offers, a new app and new support routes. Habits form in the first weeks, so this is the time to set them.
- Many products, many questions. Digital, app, print vouchers, e-mail editions and three group packages (Friends & Family, Business Standard, Business Premium) all generate different questions.
- Support is split. Digital-edition problems go to PageSuite, subscriptions to Iliffe Media Subs, and print delivery to individual titles. Readers have to know which is which.
- A digital-first push. Growing digital subscriptions is the stated priority, and each subscriber who can't get help quickly is a churn risk.

The opportunity

Give all 30 new titles one front door for reader help from day one, set up per title from a single console. Readers get the fastest route to app log-in, vouchers or delivery help, and the subscriptions team can absorb 30 titles without growing at the same rate.

Why it fits their strategy

- Scales the integration: one set of rules, reused across 30+ local brands
- Supports the digital-subscription push by steering readers to the app and self-service
- Vendor-neutral: works next to PageSuite and the existing subscriptions platform
- Live analytics show leadership how each title's readers behave from the first week

Sources: Press Gazette, Cambrian News, RadioToday (Tindle sale, Mar 2026), KentOnline, IPSO annual statement, Iliffe Media and Iliffe Media Subs pages. Facts to be re-checked before sending.

What their readers would see

/help (any title)

Get started with the app

Log in, read all our titles in one place

2 min guide

Print vouchers

Check, replace or reorder online

Self-service

Group or business subscription

Compare packages, add colleagues

1 min

Something else

Talk to the subscriptions team

Office hours

same front door, set up per title · powered by reChanneld

Illustrative mock-up, not an Iliffe Media page

Who to approach

ROLE	ANGLE
Integration / Operations lead for the Tindle titles	Scale without headcount
Head of Subscriptions / Audience Revenue	Digital-subscription growth
Customer Services Manager	Fewer repeat contacts

Family-owned business: a warm intro to leadership may work better than cold outreach.

Outreach sequence

1 · LinkedIn connection note

181 characters

Hi [Name], congrats on taking on the Tindle titles! Integrating 30 titles' readers is the perfect moment to set up their help channels right. Made a short idea for you, can I share?

2 · E-mail, day 2

Subject: 30 new titles, one front door for reader help

Hi [Name],

Congratulations on the Tindle deal. Bringing 30 titles' readers onto your app, vouchers and subscriptions is a big job, and the first weeks decide which habits they keep: calling, or self-service.

reChanneld gives every title the same “How can we help?” front door, set up per title from one console. Readers get the fastest route to app log-in, vouchers or delivery help, and your team handles the integration without growing at the same rate.

Nordic companies such as S-Bank use it today, and our clients typically guide 79% of contacts to their preferred channel. It works alongside PageSuite and your current subscriptions platform.

I've sketched what it could look like for your titles. Worth 20 minutes?

Touko Laakkonen, reChanneld

3 · Follow-up, day 7

Reply on the same thread

Hi [Name], one thought: if each title's readers set up the app in their first week, the help channel follows. We can set a nudge per title in an afternoon, ready for when your offers go live. Mock-up attached. Touko