

Kira Krysanov, on the tee.

I turned your job ad into a nine-hole scorecard.
Here's how I match the role, and three content ideas I'd bring to Golf GameBook.

MY SCORECARD

The job, hole by hole

1	Create & publish content One idea, shaped for each channel: social, email, push and web.	4
2	Own the content calendar One calendar for every channel, planned weekly, with a two-week buffer.	3
3	Coordinate campaigns A one-page brief per campaign: goal, deliverables, owners, dates.	4
4	Keep the asset library tidy One naming system. Any file found in ten seconds.	2
5	Work with creators & agencies Clear briefs, then one creator video turned into five posts.	4
6	Website & CMS I managed the company websites at Videobot and Leadoo, working with the WordPress developer.	2
7	Visuals & short video Templates that keep quick posts on brand. Hook in the first second.	2
8	Report on performance A short monthly report: what worked, what didn't, what we test next.	4
9	Community & brand voice Reply like a playing partner, not a help desk.	4

What I'd make this season

OCTOBER • PUSH & INSTAGRAM

The Last Round

Nordic courses are closing for winter. Nudge golfers to play one last round with friends, then share the community's frosty final scorecards.

Most Finnish courses close this month. Got one last round in you? 3 friends are playing Sunday.

DECEMBER • PUSH, EMAIL & CREATORS

The Season Card

A shareable "your year in golf" recap built from rounds golfers already logged. Every share is an ad made by a golfer.

Your 2026 season, scored. One personal best, and a hole that owes you an apology.

ONGOING • TIKTOK & REELS

The Honest Scorecard

A short video series about the score golfers claim at the bar versus the one their friends recorded in the app.

"He told the bar he shot 82. His friends were keeping score."

THE 19TH HOLE

Let's talk over a coffee

I'd love to hear how the team plans the season, and which of these ideas you'd change first.
